

Ntombizabantu Koyi

I heard about Workworks when I was still teaching at Intshayelelo Primary School and I was excited to be part of the Home-School Partnerships (HSP) Programme. I moved to Vukani Primary school in 2017 before I could run the HSP at my previous school. I then introduced the programme to the SMT and Principal.

They were very excited about the programme and I started recruiting parents and continued with sessions. I could see the interest in the parents and how this programme was helping them support their young children's learning. I also use the Wordworks resources in my classroom and they work great for me.

Supporting learners and knowing that learning is a process was an AHA moment for me and that inspired me to keep on teaching and learn with my children.

Children get so excited when playing games and learning in a free and safe environment. That in turn motivates me to keep on keeping on.

I am inspired by working with a group of parents and seeing their passion and patience in supporting their children's education.

Learning is a game. The more we share ideas and have fun, the more we build a firm foundation for our young children's learning journey.